

THE UNIVERSITY

Since its foundation in 1969, Bielefeld University has combined classical academic traditions with innovative research and teaching. Its concept of a university under one roof is seen as the key to open up the frontiers between disciplines and to offer unique courses of studies.

THE FACULTY

The Faculty of Business Administration and Economics is one of the 14 departments at Bielefeld University and comprises the three disciplines Economics, Statistics/Econometrics, and Business Administration. In 2009, it was placed in the "Excellence Group Economics" by the research-oriented, internationally focused "CHE excellence ranking".

BIELEFELD GRADUATE SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS AND MANAGEMENT (BiGSEM)

In 2001, the Faculty of Business Administration and Economics at Bielefeld University established in close cooperation with the Center for Mathematical Economics (IMW) the Bielefeld Graduate School of Economics and Management (BiGSEM). It offers a structured, interdisciplinary and internationally oriented three-year doctoral program with a strong research orientation. In this sense the BiGSEM agenda aspires to expose doctoral students early to the frontiers of international research and to help them to develop their own research agenda, by providing doctoral and research seminars and encouraging and supporting participation at international conferences and exchange visits within the extensive cooperation network with renowned international partners. To promote cross-disciplinary training of doctoral students and thereby to invest in internationally recognized and unique qualifications, in 2012 BiGSEM became part of the newly founded Bielefeld Graduate School in Theoretical Science (BGTS), an umbrella organization for various research (training) programs at Bielefeld University set up by the Faculties of Mathematics, Physics, Business Administration and Economics and the Center for Mathematical Economics.
